

School's Back in Session - September 18, 2008

LOS ALTOS, CA, September 18, 2008 - With fall already underway, parents are remembering all too well the pressures of back to school time. They're expected to attend monthly PTA meetings, provide their children with evening homework help, and spend hours chauffeuring them between their classrooms and afterschool activities. Additionally, they have to get dinner on the table.

Fortunately, time-strapped parents wanting to serve wholesome meals to their families no longer need to stress about meal preparation. MagicKitchen.com has created a solution with their chef-prepared meal delivery service. Their nationwide service provides main courses, side dishes, soups, desserts, and meal bundles that make serving delicious meals possible this busy autumn season - without any shopping, cooking, or clean up required.

Parents can source reliable stand-ins for busy nights, like lean and savory beef strips simmered in a mild teriyaki sauce. For chilly autumn nights, they can order comfort food like MagicKitchen.com's Cheese Ravioli with Marinara Sauce, or serve steaming bowls of their legendary Broccoli, Mushroom & Zucchini Soup. Finally, they can use MagicKitchen.com's more inventive dishes to introduce something new or exotic to their children's palates. Consider a Jambalaya with Chicken Sausage & Brown Rice or a side dish of Saffron Rice for such a purpose.

Likewise, parents who've just sent their kids off to college no longer have to worry about their eating habits. Whether their kids are attending college in state or across the country, parents can utilize MagicKitchen.com's meal delivery service to make certain their freezers are stocked with nutritionally sound meals. From Almond-Crusted Salmon to savory Santa Cruz Gardein Vegetable Enchiladas, MagicKitchen.com meals will remind students of home - and supply them with hot meals outside of that college standby: delivered pizza pies.
